She is getting a snapshot, taken of the two of us, made up for me so I can bring it home with me ~~next week-end~~ ^{Thursday}. I am looking forward to this week-end ^{and} to meeting her parents, although she is so worried that I won't like them or vice-versa that she will be a wreck when the time comes. Her father sounds like a lot of fun. She talked with him last week, and he said that he was getting the house painted, suit pressed and on and on. The teasing is vaguely familiar. He learned where I was from and asked her if she realized how big Ft. Clark was. She admitted that she did, and he went on to point out that this was $\frac{1}{2}$ the size of the town (Conneaut, Ohio) where he was born and raised. He graduated from Miami of Ohio at Oxford.

I am fairly confident that I'll get on fine with them. She was awfully pleased to hear that you were willing to have her come out for Thanksgiving. She can't make it, but we are hoping to work out something for a few days at the end of Christmas vacation.

This week-end was another very good one despite a disappointing 0-0 tie with Wesleyan in a bitterly cold wind. Next week-end decides the little three championship against Amherst. We will be underdogs but just might be able to do it if we have a good day.

The work continues to go along very well but through experience the latter part of the semester is the deciding period. I have two hour tests this week and should do well on them, but have my
